A force for peace? The History of European Cooperation

An exhibition opening at The Peace Museum in May, running until July 2016

To coincide with the current debate on the state of the European Union and Britain's continued membership, The Peace Museum is pleased to announce an exhibition which will explore the history of European cooperation.

It will feature a newly acquired 1919 copy of the Treaty of Versailles, objects relating to the League of Nations, the UN, and will explore the development of the European Economic Community, which became the EU. It will also explore the debates surrounding the upcoming referendum and present arguments from both sides.

Group bookings and school visits welcome.
